

The whale

It was a ruthless stormy day on the blustery seas. The waters were menacingly thumping against each other, fighting for their place in the ocean. Sabotaging anything that sailed upon it, sooner or later something was bound to get submerged. Later on that day the sea was still pounding and roaring at the world, warning it to keep away.

As the sea was still thundering harshly, two brave children set out to sea to try and find an extraordinary creature underneath the seas' aquarium. They were about a mile out now, when suddenly disaster struck, the two boats collided, the sea started to wrestle the boats; they looked like they were about to tip over, but then the boy catapulted over the edge. THEN!